INCONSISTENT JUDGE

A recruit in Kitchener's army was recently sent to the barracks of a large provincial town. Shortly after his arrival there he thought he would like to see the sights and asked for a "pass" from his sergeant, which he promptly received. After wandering round the town to his heart's content he tried to find his way back, and being unacquainted with the place, this was no easy matter. Eventually he reached the barracks some hours late, to be brought before his sergeant for an explanation.

Sergeant—What is the meaning of your turning up so late?
 Recruit—I lost my way, sir.
 Sergeant—You lost your way?
 Recruit—Yes, sir.
 Sergeant—Well, you had better stay in barracks until you know the town better. Dismissed—Exchange.
